globeform analysis

DARYAKANA must be the selection here. Owned by HH The Aga Khan, she is trained by Alain de Royer-Dupre, one of the best handlers in the world, and he nominated this race as her next target as soon as she had landed the Prix de Royallieux (G2) at Longchamp in early October. Daryakana was a smooth winner of that event, run over half a furlong further than the trip she will be tackling on Sunday. She quickened nicely from the back, to pass horses one by one up the long straight in Paris, and won by 2 ½ lengths from Peinture Rare.

This was Daryakana's fourth success in as many starts. She has been progressing fast since making her racecourse debut on July 9. By far the most likely big improver in this field, Daryakana has drawn well on the inside, meaning that she should enjoy a ground saving trip. She will probably be at the back early on, however, and the one concern is the pace scenario. Ideally, she wants sharp early fractions, as she stays so well, but she does have a nice turn of foot and all in all Daryakana makes more appeal than any other runner in the Vase. Having run to Globeform 116p in the Royallieux, she only needs to step up another couple of lengths to win.

YOUMZAIN is the horse with the best form, having run second twice in the 'Arc', and he is obviously the one she has to beat, while the local hero VIVA PATACA is also a tough nut to crack on his day. He was handed a bad draw though, and may be up against it this time. BLACK MAMBA is the best of the longshots, as she has form in California placing her right up with the best on ratings (like Daryakana she gets a valuable 4lb pull at the weights with the boys). SPANISH MOON was unable to produce his best at the Breeders' Cup, but he still ran a respectable race to take fourth behind stable companion Conduit in the BC Turf. The form of his two big race wins in France, in the Grand Prix de Saint-Cloud (G1) – left handed – and Prix Foy (G2) reads well. Looking for a prominent position early on, he has been given a nice draw in stall five, between two horses that will probably break a tad slowly (Daryakana and Kasbah Bliss). JAGUAR MAIL went agonisingly close in this event 12 months ago, when breaking from stall two and he has the rail post this time – he's another who could run a big race.

CALIFORNIA FLAG ran a remarkable race at the Breeders' Cup and, despite this being his first attempt over a right-handed track, he gets the vote. A sprinter that handles Santa Anita's downhill turf course can handle most tracks. Of course, he will up against better horses here, than what was the case in California last month, but the way he won the BC Turf Sprint (G1) suggests he can match strides with some of the best turf sprinters in the world these days. California Flag has developed into a serious racehorse this term, and he made virtually all to beat a solid field at Santa Anita – where leading from start to finish over 6 furlongs is almost unheard of. But California Flag did just that, and he had all his opponents in trouble as soon as he turned for home. The filly Gotta Have Her, another course specialist coming into the race in top form, ran on for second – without ever being a serious threat. CANNONBALL, who had shown such good form at Royal Ascot in the summer (and also runs here), had to settle for third, 2 ½ lengths behind California Flag, who earned a career best Globeform 121 in the process. His blistering early speed, combined with his ability to keep going right to the wire over six panels, could make the US runner hard to beat. A North American exacta would not be the biggest of shocks either.

SCENIC BLAST is a world-class turf sprinter, with rock solid performances in Australia and England this year, and why he is 7-1 with the bookmakers is hard to understand. He has the class to beat them all here, and must be included in our bets. The Sprint is wide-open but he is one of the strongest contenders. The son of Scenic has an excellent record over this distance, with 4 wins from 9 attempts (he is 7-for-9 in the first three over 1200 m.). That said, this is a sprinter with plenty of early speed too. Scenic Blast was visually most impressive when landing the King's Stand Stakes (G1) over 5 furlongs (1000 m) at Royal Ascot in June. He overcame a poor post position to rattle home by just under a length from Fleeting Spirit. She gained revenge when winning the July Cup (G1) at Newmarket the following month, but the step up in distance had nothing to do with Scenic Blast's below par effort then. Checking in eighth of ten, he simply had an off day. It may have had something to do with the undulating nature of the Newmarket course, as Scenic Blast is more used to – and highly effective over – flat tracks. Sha Tin will suit him and he holds a big chance. Having won the Newmarket Handicap (G1) at Flemington in March (from Swiss Ace), he is a winner of three G1 events this season and Scenic Blast can bounce back from a dull run the Sprinters Stakes (G1) in Japan, where he finished well down the field behind LAUREL GUERREIRO (a very speedy horse who will also make his presence felt).

SACRED KINGDOM won the HK Sprint in 2007 but bypassed the championship event last year. He is one of the best sprinters to have been trained in Hong Kong over the years, and they have had some pretty serious speed merchants at this venue. Sacred Kingdom must always be feared. Back in May, he denied the local favourite Rocket Man to win the Krisflyer Sprint (G1) by a neck at Kranji (INSPIRATION a well-beaten ninth). Sacred Kingdom prepped well for the HK Sprint by running second in the Hong Kong Sprint Trial (G3), beaten 2 lengths by Mile contender Happy Zero (who was receiving 5lb). This performance was worth Globeform 118p and, as Sacred Kingdom is capable of GF 124, his connections would have been well satisfied with the run – his first since finishing fifth to Art Connoisseur in the Golden Jubilee Stakes (G1) at Royal Ascot in England five months earlier. With 12 wins from 20 starts (7 over this distance and 6 over thi course/distance), Sacred Kingdom has an impressive record. He is probably just as good as ever and a big run is expected.

APACHE CAT is also in with a realistic chance of lifting this prize. The white-faced Australian, winner of 19 of his 42 races, finished third in the 2008 HK Sprint, half a length behind INSPIRATION, and that was not his absolute best form. He won the Doomben 10,000 Stakes (G1) over 1350 metres at home in May, defeating Black Pirhana by a head. Apache Cat was favourite that day and the public were all over his number onc more when he lined up for the Schweppes Stakes (G3) over 1350 at Moonee Valley on October 24. Apache Cat's form has been quite consistent this term and when he's good he's very good – like in the Schweppes, where he battled home strongly to deny Mic Mac by a neck. He was subsequently fourth to ALL SILENT in the Patinack Farm Classic (G1) over 1000 m. Straight at Flemington. All Silent beat him by 1 ½ length (level weights). Apache Cat seems better in one-turn sprints, and he is preferred to All Silent this time. The latter gets a lot of support from Aussie punters, but they are playing a risky game at short odds here, backing a sprinter from stall 14 at Sha Tin.

GOOD BA BA won this event in great style last season, when he showed a classy turn of foot in the home straight, to sweep ahead for a facile 2 ½-length win over ABLE ONE, who reopposes this weekend. Good Ba Ba, quite a lightly built and racy gelding, now seven years old, returned Globeform 123 in the process, and there is no doubt that he is capable of such a high mark. He began this year's campaign with a solid win in the Stewards' Cup (G1) and a game runner-up effort in the Queen's Silver Jubilee Stakes (G1) in January and March, both staged here at Sha Tin, where Good Ba Ba has been successful ten times. He beat FELLOWSHIP by 1 ¾ lengths in the one-mile Stewards' Cup, and probably found the drop down to 7 furlongs (1400 m) in the Silver Jubilee a bit too sharp, as EGYPTIAN RA beat him by just under a length.

That was his final start of the 2008-2009 season and the son of Lear Fan returned to action in the Sha Tin Trophy (G3), a handicap over a mile, and ran a decent race under top weight, to finish seventh, 3 lengths behind Packing Winner. He moved forward in the Hong Kong Mile Trial (G3) in November (a race he had been 3rd in last year). Running on well from off the pace, Good Ba Ba got up for third in the final prep, beaten 1 ½ lengths by FELLOWSHIP, who carried 5lb less than Good Ba Ba. Reversing the form with Fellowship should be no problem, and Good Ba Ba has the beating of them all – if he's back to his best. Age is not on his side, however, and he looks pretty short in the betting. Sure enough, he sets the standard and he is the champion, but horses with scope for improvement are too close up on our figures to justify a bet at anything under 2-1. Which is unlikely to be on offer at Sha Tin, where this horse is incredibly popular.

HAPPY ZERO, coming off a nice 2-length win over Sacred Kingdom in the Hong Kong Sprint Trial (G2) last month, makes a lot of appeal in this race. The 5yo gelding, a son of Danzero, has lost just once in his eight-race career, and he is a progressive type. A runner with plenty of talent, he could well be the one they all have to beat on Sunday. Happy Zero finished really strongly to win the Sprint Trial, running on like a horse that could have no trouble getting further than the 1200 metres (6 furlongs) he tackled on that occasion. He could easily have gone to the HK Sprint after that effort, but trainer John Moore chose the Mile and it is easy to see why. The Sprint has a really deep field and since he has already proven himself over 1400 metres, there is no reason to doubt Happy Zero's credentials over 1600. Indeed, his running style suggests that he may be even better when stretching out. Prior to his win over Sprint contender Sacred Kingdom, Happy Zero won the Sha Tin Sprint Trophy over 1000 metres (5fur.), beating One World by 1 ¼ lengths. This win was also gained from off the pace, and it was his first start of the new season in Hong Kong. With such a strong upward curve to his form profile, he is the most sensible selection in the Hong Kong Mile.

PRESSING is the value bet for longshot punters. Ladbrokes bookmakers have him at a massive 25-1. Quite how they have come to that price is hard to work out. Pressing is one of the best horses in this field, he is very effective over a mile, his prominent running style makes him a big danger over a turning mile trip like this, and he is an experienced traveller. Ideally drawn in seven, a 25-1 bet on Pressing looks great value. The Michael Jarvis trainee has won the last two runnings of the Topkapi Trophy (G1) on Turkey, a race run over a mile at a track quite similar to Sha Tin. He produced yet another tough performance when beating Dream Eater by a nose in Istanbul in September, and he has since run third (bit below his best) in the Premio Ribot (G2) in Italy (2 ½ length behind Silver Arrow on unsuitably heavy ground). Pressing is a game and consistent runner, who acts well on firm, good and soft ground, he is 10-for-32 lifetime and he has won five of his last ten races. Over this period, he has also been second once and third twice.

FERNELEY has been put up at 33-1 by English bookmakers. About half that price would be a more accurate reflection. He produced good performances to win the Del Mar Mile (G2) and run second to Ventura in the Woodbine Mile (G1), before running below par in the Breeders' Cup Mile (G1). Trainer Ben Cecil says that he feels the horse will be better around a right-handed track. If so, and Ferneley improves a length or two on his previous best, he'll be right up with the best in this field.

CONFRONT is also worth considering. A big, massive gelding, he has been late maturing and he showed his best form on his last two starts of the year in England, where he is part of the powerful Sir Michael Stoute team. Confront began the year by landing a handicap at Newmarket (amazingly at 8-1) and he improved enough to win the Joel Stakes (G3) at the same venue in October. That was quite a competitive mile event and Confront fought off his main market rival Rio de La Plata to win by half a length. There could be better still to come, though his size may be a worry at a turning track like Sha Tin. Confront's best form in England has come over straight tracks. Drawn in stall 12, he will be able to make full use of his long stride but he is also in danger of being forced wide. He likes to be up with the pace.

EGYPTIAN RA, third in the Mile last year and a course specialist, beat FELLOWSHIP in a handicap here in October and ran fifth to that same rival in the Hong Kong Mile Trial (G2) in November. Calssy enough to be up in the mix, he has to overcome a wide post to make big money this time – and that may not be easy for a horse that is at his best when on the lead.

PRESVIS winner of the Queen Elizabeth II Cup (G1) over this course and distance in the spring, returns for more of the pots on offer at Sha Tin, and the high class gelding clearly holds a winning chance again. He was beaten in his prep race in England, when failing to give 6lb to Tranquil Tiger in a Listed event at Lingfield Park, but that result should not be held against him. Presvis needed the run and the winner is a pretty smart performer – who was fully tuned up for the task. Something Presvis was not. He is guaranteed to strip much fitter on the big day. This is a race his trainer Luca Cumani has had in his plans ever since the QE II, so Presvis is one of the favourites. Many will argue that he deserves to be the favourite and it is hard to argue with that.

VISION D'ETAT is an interesting runner. Having been rested since the Prix de l'Arc de Triomphe (G1) in Paris in early October (bit below form), he comes here fresh, he is racing over his optimum trip and both the course and the likely going should suit last year's winner of the Prix du Jockey Club (G1) – or the 'French Derby' if you like. Vision d'Etat has improved since that classic win and he proved his class in no uncertain manner by landing the Prince Of Wales's Stakes (G1) over 10 furlongs at Royal Ascot in June (beat Tartan Bearer half a length, with Never On Sunday third and Twice Over fourth). He subsequently ran another nice race when second to Spanish Moon in the Prix Foy (G2), where Vision d'Etat was given a very tender ride and finished well. His sub-standard effort in the 'Arc' was disappointing but let's forgive him that one dull showing – he is much better than the tenth place finish behind Sea The Stars suggests. That said, he was beaten just over six lengths behind the European champion and to call it bad form would be harsh. It was just not his best. Eric Libaud's charge holds a good chance in the Hong Kong Cup. He has won 8 of his 12 races, been successful in 4 of his 5 attempts at this distance, and he goes well after a break. Lots of plus points, in other words, and Vision d'Etat is certainly one to consider.

COLLECTION is coming off his career best effort, having landed the Hong Kong Cup Trial (G2) over this trip in good style last month. A Listed winner at Royal Ascot last year, Collection came with a strong late kick to beat Unique Jewellery by 2 lengths that day, as MR MEDICI (receiving 5lb) finished a close third. This was Collection's sixth with from 14 starts. He is 3-for-4 over the HK Cup distance and he has finished in the first three nine times. A gelded son of Peintre Celebre, he seems to be on the upgrade these days and his credentials are already very good. Back in March, he took the Hong Kong Derby (G1), coming home 1 1/2 lengths clear of HK Vase contender Thumbs Up (who was third to Presvis in the QEII next time out). In between his two big wins, Collection ran three respectable races in defeat, without performing right up to his best. He is strongly fancied by local fans and it is easy to see why, but his record is not 'rock solid', his wide draw may be a problem and how he should be a shorter price than the likes of Presvis and Vision d'Etat – both proven on the international stage – is hard to work out.

EAGLE MOUNTAIN won this race last year, after having run second to Conduit in the Breeders' Cup Turf (G1) at Santa Anita. Mike de Kock's star thus rounded off his 2008 campaign in great style. He ran out a 1 1/4-length winner from Balius here twelve months ago, when Linngari was third and Viva Pataca finished fourth. A repeat of this level of form would make Eagle Mountain hard to beat but he has been troubled by injury this year and he was beaten 10 lengths when beating only one home in the HK Mile Trial (won by Fellowship) – his first run back since last year's HK Cup. Sure to have needed the run, he falls into the 'might finish anywhere' basket this time.

WITH SO MUCH HYPE surrounding the locally trained Collection, and probably also support for last year's winner Eagle Mountain, this is a race where we must have a crack at an all-European exacta or quinella, i.e. Presvis and Vision d'Etat to fill the first two places. It is a very possible outcome and it could pay well over the odds at Sha Tin.
